Dorothy Tenno (August 29, 1928 February 3, 2007) was an American psychologist who, in her 1979 book Love and Limerence the Experience of Being in Love introduced the term "limerence".

False Forms of Love: Limerence and Its Alluring Lies

This false form of love was discovered during a very good research effort conducted by Dr. Dorothy Tenno. She coined the term limerence and wrote the book on the subject which is called Love and Limerence, published by Stein and Day. I heartily recommend this book to those who want to know more. There are, of course, websites dealing with this topic and some therapists who are Is It True Love Or Just Limerence? A Therapist Explains ...

In 1979, before we knew about "the love drug," psychologist Dorothy Tenno coined the term "limerence" to describe the chemical reactions that happen in the brain when we fall head over heels for someone "crazy in love," so to speak. Regardless of whether the person is a good match for us, the Tenno's central argument, illustrated with accounts from individual experiences, is that there is a well defined and involuntary state "limerence" (a term chosen to avoid the confusion surrounding "love"); roughly equating with "being in love". Key features include obsessive thinking about the limerent object, irrationally positive evaluation of their attributes, emotional dependency, and

Limerence - Wikipedia

Origin and meaning of the term. Psychologist Dorothy Tenno coined the term "limerence" for her 1979 book, Love and Limerence: The Experience of Being in Love, to describe a concept that had grown out of her work in the mid-1960s, when she interviewed over 500 people on the topic of love.
